5 DEFINITION OF HIGH INTENSITY

For the purposes of this policy 'high intensity' refers to training and activity that would exceed skill development and/or cause the body to be exposed to forces that require the individual to exert more force or strength that is not suitable to their age, gender or experience. Examples include:

- a. activity in surf where the potential to be exposed to risk situations may occur due to skill level, development of participant and risk of injury; or
- b. training which exposes individuals to stresses that are not developmental or skill based.
